

Play store always says pending

I'm not robot!

Why is my play store always pending. Why does my play store say pending. Play store always says pending. Why is play store showing pending.

What if you're trying to download an app or game, only to have the Google Play Store stuck with a download pending error? It can be frustrating as it prevents you from downloading your favorite app or game on your Android device. But we are here to help! In this guide, we will walk you through multiple solutions that will help you fix the Google "Play Store download pending" error. With that said, let's jump right into it. Why is Play Store Download Stuck on Pending? One of the most common reasons why your Play Store downloads get stuck in download pending is because you may have too many apps updating at the same time. There's no single cause for the "Play Store download pending" error. For some, the issue may pop up because of their app download preference, or their phone storage ran out of memory. Netflix pending to download. Screenshot: Sagar Naresh/Gotechtor For others, internet connection issues, unfinished Google account setup, older Android firmware, or Play Store version are the culprit for the "Play Store download pending" error. Now that you have some idea of what could be possibly triggering this error, let's take a look at the fixes. 1. Check App Download Preference If you're not installing any app and Google Play Store is showing the download pending error, then it may be due to your app download preference. Under the Settings menu of the Play Store, there is an option to set app download preference. This gives you the option to set Wi-Fi, mobile data, or both to download apps or games. If you've changed this setting, your phone may show a download pending error when trying to download an app. Here's how you can change the app download preference. 1. Open Google Play Store and tap on your Profile image. 2. Next, select Settings option from the popup menu. Android settings option. Sagar Naresh/Gotechtor 3. Tap on Network preferences and then select App download preference. Android Network Preferences settings. Sagar Naresh/Gotechtor 4. From the list, select the Over any network option. Then, tap the DONE button to confirm your choice. App download preferences on Android. Sagar Naresh/Gotechtor After performing the above steps, check if you can download apps or games without any issues. 2. Check Your Internet Connection As mentioned earlier, internet connection issues can be the reason why Google Play is not downloading your app or game. If Google Play Store says no internet connection, make sure that you have a stable internet connection on your phone. Better yet, switch over to a Wi-Fi connection instead of your mobile data connection and see if that fixes the issue or not. If you have a strong internet connection Corrupt temporary or cache data can hinder the smooth functioning of an app. When an app becomes buggy or unresponsive, it is best to clear its cache. This will give the app a fresh start and can help fix certain temporary issues. Here's how to do it: 1. Open the Settings app on your phone, tap on Apps & notifications and then See all X apps. List of Apps on Android. Sagar Naresh/Gotechtor 2. Scroll down and select Google Play Store. Google Play Store app. Sagar Naresh/Gotechtor 3. Tap on Storage & cache, and click on Clear data and Clear storage, respectively. Clear storage and cache on Android. Sagar Naresh/Gotechtor Re-open the Play Store and try to download the app or game again. 4. Check Your Phone Storage Space Another reason for Google Play Store getting stuck at the "download pending" error is the lack of storage space on your Android device. Your phone will show you a warning notification regarding low storage space when you try to download an app or game. However, you can manually check the storage space on your device by heading over to Settings > Storage. Clear storage space on Android. Screenshot: Sagar Naresh/Gotechtor Here, you can uninstall unused apps, and delete old photos or videos. Or you can take a backup of unwanted photos and videos on your PC and delete them from your phone, etc. to clear up the storage space. After doing this, try again to download the app or game from Play Store and see if this fixes the issue. 5. Stop Other Downloads If there is another download or update in progress, then you may come across the Google Play Store download pending error. If that's the case, go ahead and cancel the other downloads. 1. Open Google Play Store on your phone, tap on your profile image and select My apps and games. Manage apps and device on Android. Sagar Naresh/Gotechtor 2. Under the Overview tab, tap on See details. See app details on Android. Sagar Naresh/Gotechtor 3. Now, you need to click on the Cancel all button at the top-right to dismiss all downloads. Cancel pending downloads on Android. Sagar Naresh/Gotechtor Once that is done, try to re-download the app or game you were facing an issue with and check if this fixes the issue or not. 6. Disable VPN on Your Android Device VPN or Virtual Proxy Network allows you to stay anonymous on the internet. Many people make use of VPN software to access region-locked content. Often, VPN can cause Play Store download pending problems due to server issues, or a bug within the app. So, go ahead and disable the VPN app on your Android phone and then try to download the app or game from Play Store. If by any chance your phone date and time are incorrect, it can raise multiple issues on your phone, including the "Play Store download pending" error. So, you'll want to make sure that your phone is detecting the right time and date for where you are. Here's how you can check if the date and time are correctly set on your Android device or not. 1. Open the Settings app and navigate to System. Android system settings. Sagar Naresh/Gotechtor 2. Select Date & time option. Android date and time settings. Sagar Naresh/Gotechtor 3. Here, you can set the date and time manually. But, it is recommended to turn on the Use network-provided time and Use network-provided time zone toggles. Android network time settings. Sagar Naresh/Gotechtor 8. Download App from Browser If none of the above-mentioned methods worked for you, then you can try to download the app from the browser of your choice on your computer. Simply, open Google Play Store on your browser and search for the app or game you wish to install. Click on the Install button and select your current device to install the app. Install app/game via a browser on your PC. Screenshot: Sagar Naresh/Gotechtor Final Thoughts on Play Store Download Pending Well, there you have it. The above solutions, hopefully, should have helped you fix the Play Store download pending issue. In case none of these fixes have helped you resolve the issue, remove and then re-add your Google account and try to download the app again from Play Store. Let us know in the comments below if you have any questions or any other method that fixed the problem for you. Share on Twitter Share on Facebook Share on Email Share on WhatsApp Play Store download pending is one of the issues you could face while installing new apps on your Android device from the Google Play Store. When the error occurs, it causes your phone not to download any new apps. Anything that you try to download remains pending regardless of what you do. It's really frustrating not being able to install apps from the Play Store, especially as it's the only source of trusted app downloads for Android devices. If you too are facing the issue, there are a few methods you might want to try and see if they help resolve the issue. Cancel The Current Downloads An/Or Updates One of the possible reasons why your Play Store downloads get stuck in download pending is because you have many of them already running on your device. To fix it, you can disable the installation and updates for all the apps that you don't urgently need, and then get the app you actually really want installed. Launch the Google Play Store on your device. Tap on the three horizontal-lines at the top-left corner. Select My apps & games on the following screen. If you see any apps or games being updated currently, cancel their processes by tapping X next to them. Download Over Mobile Data If WiFi Doesn't Work Since your app downloads require the Internet, you should make sure that your Internet connection works. If you're on a WiFi network and it's stopped working for some reason, you can actually change your Internet source to cellular data to download your apps. Turn off WiFi and enable cellular data on your phone. Open the Google Play Store on your phone. Tap on the three horizontal-lines at the top-left corner and select Settings. Choose App download preference on the following screen. Enable the Over any network option and tap on Done. Try to download an app from the Store and it should work. Turn Off The VPN App On Your Device The Play Store download pending issue could be caused by a VPN app as well. Since VPNs basically spoof your location, it may lead Google Play Store to think you aren't in the country where you should be according to your device, and it can pause your downloads. If that's the case, there really isn't much you need to do to fix the issue. All you need to do is disable the VPN app on your phone and you should be good to go. The steps on how to disable a VPN vary by the app you use. In most apps, though, you'll find a large button on the main interface letting you turn the service on and off. You want to turn it off to fix the Play Store issue. Delete Play Store Data Like other apps on your device, the Play Store app also stores its configurations and settings in temporary files on your device. Sometimes, these files could be the reason why you have issues in the Store. To fix it, simply remove the Play Store app files and you'll be good to go. Launch the Settings app on your device. Tap on the Apps & notifications option. Find and tap on the Google Play Store app. Select Clear Storage and clear the files. Choose Clear Cache and clear the cache files. Uninstall Play Store Updates If the Play Store download pending issue has come up only after a recent Play Store update, the update might be the culprit here. Fortunately, your device allows you to roll back these updates and that should fix the issue for you. On your device, open the Settings app, tap on Apps & notifications, and choose the Google Play Store app. Tap on the three-dots at the top-right corner of your screen and select Uninstall updates. A prompt will appear on your screen. Tap on OK to continue. Free-Up Memory Space On Your Phone Each new app you download to your device requires a certain amount of space. If you're running out of memory on your phone, you're going to need to clear some memory before your apps can be downloaded. Having insufficient storage can be the cause of the pending downloads issue in the Play Store. Open the Settings app on your phone. Tap on Storage to view your storage details. It'll let you know what's occupying what amount of storage. Delete the items that you think you'll no longer need to make room for your new apps. Reset Your App Preferences When you install an app that can open certain file types, your device allows you to set it as the default app for that specific file format. While this doesn't directly have anything to do with your pending downloads issue, it's worth clearing this app preferences to see if it helps resolve the issue. You can always set an app as a default opening tool for your files even when the preferences are reset. Launch Settings on your phone. Tap on Apps & notifications. Tap on the three-dots at the top-right corner and select Reset app preferences. Factory Reset Your Device Lastly, if nothing works and you still have the Play Store download pending issue on your phone, your last resort should be to reset your phone to the factory settings. It'll clear all of your configurations, settings, data, and let you set up your phone from scratch. Make sure to backup the files you need before you wipe off your device. Open the Settings app. Tap on System at the bottom. Select Erase all data (factory reset). Follow the on-screen prompts to reset your device to the factory settings. Has the Google Play Store ever caused any issues to prevent new app downloads on your Android device? If so, what did you do to fix it? We await your response in the comments below.
